

Adrian McGregor included on Sydney Creative Catalyst List

Adrian McGregor has been included on an inaugural list of Sydney's most creative people for 2009, a collection of 100 of the city's top creative pioneers.

Called the Creative Catalysts, the group were selected from a list of over 700 people, suggested by a range of industry advisors— creative leaders and people who have expertise in various design fields - and augmented with a call out through social media.

"It's about people who have taken the initiative to make a creative Sydney. Some of them are well known and obvious, others have simply inspired others in their field or changed the way Sydney does things or sees itself. By highlighting their stories we celebrate their creativity and hope to inspire others to see their city as a place they too can shape and change"

The Creative Catalysts are part of Creative Sydney, a festival celebrating the wealth and diversity of the city's creative talents running from May 27- June 12 2009. In its inaugural year, Creative Sydney features a provocative series of talks and events at the Museum of Contemporary Art.

The creative Sydney team organising the event is led by Marcus Westbury and includes Brandon Saul, Stuart Buchanan and Jess Scully, all renowned for their creative contribution to the city.
